Student Affairs Reconsidered: A Christian View of the Profession and its Contexts (Calvin Center Series):

This book asks Christian educators particularly those involved in the student affairs profession to become more engaged with the idea that the programs offered, classes taught, disciplinary actions dispensed, policies framed, and the like, are the arenas in which Christianity must take shape. The book also challenges educators at non-sectarian institutions to entertain the notion that a Christian view of higher learning in general and the student affairs profession in particular may not only be a plausible alternative but a helpful paradigm as well. Contents: A Framework of Understanding, D. Terry Thomas and David S. Guthrie; Student Affairs in Historical Perspective, Barry J. Loy and William M. Painter; Student Learning and Student Affairs, David S. Guthrie; Christian Higher Education and Christian Student Affairs, David S. Guthrie; Theorizing in Student Affairs from a Christian Perspective, Jeanette Bult De Jong; Model Programs in Student Affairs, Jay H. Barnes and Kate Harrington; Reframing Student Affairs and Higher Learning, Kate Harrington.

...helpful little book. (Comparative Education)"Student affairs administrators at all types of institutions ought to read this book. It provides a good base for thought and discussion about the purposes of the profession, the theories of student development and learning environments." (Richard L. Palm Acpa Journal Of College Student Developments)...a welcome contribution...the authors have begun a discussion that will prepare us to think better about the changing world of higher education and our mission within it.
