57 of 58 people found the following review helpful. very helpfulBy Dana E. TracyI have used this book for a number of years and it is very helpful. For those of us who do not plan extended stops, or travel around, it is nice to know where to find campgrounds and what is available. Of a particular help is one that took me a while to realize and that is the amount of available rv's sites compared to the amount of open sites. Many times rv's don't seem to be all that welcome in places that are mostly permanent residents. So as you look at the campground information and it says, for example, 250 sites--50 available, it will be full or permanent residents. Don't get me wrong, that is fine if it is what you prefer. I, however, prefer to stay with rv's who are doing similar to what I am. I have found them to be much friendlier and helpful. This is no big revelation to many but it has been my observation over the past 10 years. 23 of 23 people found the following review helpful. Trailer Life Directory By David N We buy this directory every year since we travel quite a bit. My wife (the navigator) prefers this directory over the Woodall's (both are produced by the same parent company) mostly because of the better layout. The stick-on state index tabs are tedious to put on but are helpful in quickly finding the state you are looking for. I wish the state locator maps were printed at the beginning of the state listings but all the maps are located toward the front of the book. I can understand why: they are in color and on a better grade paper. Just a little inconvenient to flip back and forth. Campground data provided is nearly always accurate. The Woodall's book has led us to a couple of dumpy campgrounds that weren't even listed in the Trailer Life directory. Seems like the TL Directory may have better reviewers. 10 of 10 people found the following review helpful. Rating System Needs Improvement By JCL Have used this directory for more years than I can remember. The user must take the CG rating with a grain of salt. When staying at a CG found in the directory, I have always wondered how the rating was arrived at, as there seems to be no connection between reality and the rating. Sometimes I think the rating is based on how much advertising the particular CG does with TL Enterprises. We spent the winter at a CG with a very good rating, however, the voltage was so low, we were unable to use our appliances. Also, the fact that there was a skeet shooting range 100yds from our site didn't seem to have entered into the rating. We thought we were in a combat zone until 10PM nights. The directory is great for locating the CG's, but don't put a lot of weight on the rating. Users of the directory should be able to submit rating cards for CG's they have visited.
